

“Open your heart to receive the blessings...”

Spiritry Midspring Tarot Reading

May 2010

Learner, eight of pentacles

If you identify as a learner, then who is your teacher? If you are a seeker, for what or whom are you seeking? Where is the mentor, elder, or advisor that has your back? Do you appear naked and alone in the spirit realm? Are you wandering from church to church, mosque to mosque, ile to ile looking for a perfect fit? As you seek and search for your spiritual home, whos got your back? Under whose protective umbrella do you reside? Where is your spiritual family/home? At this mid-point of the season, its time to come in from the rain. It is time to connect with likeminded others who can support, affirm and reflect your truths. Someones got to look out for you, and this is no time to be playing at Lone Ranger. You need hands-on, tender loving care. Open your heart to receive the blessings of spiritual advocacy, camaraderie, and community.

Release old hurts, and allow the healing that can come from a fresh infusion of true fellowship. If youve been burned by dealings with an unhealthy community, make your peace with God and get on with it. Dont let old wounds prevent you from getting the spiritual nourishment and guidance you need. Find someplace else to fellowship, but by all means, reinsert yourself into the web of life in some way. The hunger for consistent connection, knowledge, wisdom, and understanding will not go away, and isolation is harmful. As the latter half of Spring unfolds, commit to a period of personal discipline so that you can receive direct instructions from your inner personal guidance system. When she says, Turn here, you have arrived at your destination, do it.
